

LaserBug

By Faith Hilgart

The ground rumbled as a towering beast erupted from the streets of New York city. He was made of earth and wretchedness. Each of his steps were as powerful as an earthquake. The city was crumbling and nobody could stop the beast. Everything was destroyed. Only a few survivors. Then... A bolt of light came from a cloud. All of the remaining folks in the area gasp! With the bolt came an odd looking green and blue bug. This bug had interesting yellow eyes. Within a millisecond another bolt came from his eyes. The earth monster roared out in pain. "That little tiny bug did that?" One of the observers exclaimed. Then the bug struck again and this time the monster noticed him. The earth beast peered down at the tiny ladybug looking thing. He growled and tried to stomp on Laserbug, but he was too fast and agile. He flew around to the back of the earth beast and started to laser his back. He completely got rid of all the fur on the beast's back before he even noticed that Laserbug was not dead. LaserBugs' tiny voice broke out.

"Everyone clear the premises! Soon this area will not be safe!" The mood was set. The thunder could not compare to the thing that was 100 feet tall. The city rumbled and the bridge broke. The only way to get out was destroyed. Then, as if it were a miracle, a ferry came by at that exact moment. All the New Yorkers shouted and waved the ferry down. The earth monster was upon them. Laserbug would have to hurry up! The earth rattled again and the ferry stopped. It was too low to let down the ramp so Laserbug used his electricity powers to make a sparky bridge. The people cheered! They all hurried onto the ferry just as Mr. Beastly came upon them. Then, after everyone had escaped safely, Laserbug whistled. What looked like 100 mecha bugs came! Each Bug opened and 100 bugs flew out of all of the bots! The bugs did not have yellow eyes, but they each had pretty good force. They pushed the earth giant at the same time and managed to get him off balance. It was not enough. The laser bug suddenly grew 1000 times his size! He towered over the hideous monster and used his electricity powers. The monster shot into the water. The beast was destroyed and everyone was safe. The only problem was... The beast crashed right into the Statue of Liberty.

The End

By Faith Hilgart, 11
5th grade, Willow Springs Elementary School